How do we engage with sustainable development in our own work?

One priority in the Sustainable Development Goals agenda is policy coherence for sustainable development. Do non-development policy arenas contribute to or detract from sustainability? This policy mechanism is viewed as key to promoting sustainable development at the global, regional and local levels.

Our ongoing contribution to Sustainability

My research presently examines policy coherence for development (PCD) in relation to different issue arenas including migration and development; water and development; security and development; payment for watershed services; and cross-border integration. I study these phenomena utilizing comparative methodologies in different world regions. An underlying research question asks: Through what mechanisms can regional organizations successfully promote sustainable development?

Suggested readings

